

Wonderful book by a great New Zealand Author.

The first Dental Act was passed in 1858, by which time there were about 50 dentists practising in New Zealand. By 1860 there were registered and by 1865, when the New Zealand Dental Association was founded, there were 100 registered dentists. In A History of Dentistry in New Zealand, Brooking (1988) has the origins of the profession of dentistry amongst barbers, pharmacists, blacksmiths, doctors, and a number of other trades – with the result being that a visit to the dentist was usually a gruesome experience.
