

Clarence has finally found a home in the town library, but will he be ousted when the librarian discovers his uselessness as a mouser? Clarence may be a cat, but heâ€™s a peace-loving catâ€”definitely not a mouser. This gets him evicted from his parentsâ€™ home at Samâ€™s Sandwich Shop. Sadly, other storekeepers shoo him away too, as soon as a dreaded m-o-u-s-e appears. Poor Clarence just canâ€™t find a place without mice. Dejected and tired, Clarence is feeling very sorry for himself when a kindly librarian takes him in. Clarenceâ€™s new home is grandâ€”a public library filled with books. Thereâ€™s even a whirring copy machine! Clarence loves to sit on top of it, earning him the name Copy Cat. For months, life is good. Very good . . . until the winter day when a you-know-what shows up. . . .
