

Strategic thinking is the art of war applied to business. It is thought, analysis, imagination and judgment applied to a competitive situation in which there are economic winners and losers. Around the world, you, as today's CEO or the CEO who will be leading tomorrow's businesses need to survey the business battlefield and to answer key questions that will help you determine strategy and use it to move your organisation purposefully into the future. These essays have been written for you, an often-beleaguered warrior. They guide your strategic thinking through clearly drawn pictures of the many types of terrain over which you must now expect to fight. They draw on author James B. Haybyrne's more than 30 years of practical experience in advising and guiding CEOs worldwide to craft, execute and sustain the results of highly specific strategies for their increasingly global businesses. It incorporates the insights of some of today's most influential and provocative thinkers and doers in and out of business, blending their views within a powerful "story" about strategy entitled The Journey Begins...Seven Steps To A Successfully Executed Strategy. It takes the reader behind the scenes of some lesser-known enterprises such as Zildjian and Levenger to see how they have used the strategic concepts, as set out in various essays, to emerge victorious from the battle. A detailed "Battlefield Map" provides a strong visual summary of strategy and the complex variables that influence its execution. Together with a second "Seven Steps Map", they provide a straightforward framework for strategic decision-making. This will enable you, as the CEO, to work with your senior executive team to turn readily available information into strategic, actionable knowledge, using "Common Sense, Uncommonly Applied" to establish clear new directions for the future. These essays challenge you, today's and tomorrow's CEO, to cast your role as a strategic thinker as you lead your organisation through the dawn of the 21st century.
