

In/visible Sight is a fascinating exploration of a little-known part of our history: the lives of part-Maori, part-Pakeha New Zealanders in the nineteenth century. Focussing on interracial intimacy between Ngai Tahu and Pakeha settlers, it explores how intermarriage played a key role in shaping colonial encounters. As Ngai Tahu sought to fight the alienation of their land and protect their natural resources, marriage practices and kinship networks became an increasingly important way to control interaction with Pakeha. The book also explores the contradictions and ambiguities of mixed-descent lives, offering new insights into New Zealand's colonial past.
