

Old Sayings I Just Made Up began on Twitter. Although I have a Masters Degree in poetry from The University of Iowa Writers Workshop, the 140 character restriction on Twitter was challenging and reminded me of poetry. I wrote all of my sayings which were basically summations of discussions I had with everybody in my life: wife, kids, friends, strangers, students, etc. I was cranking out the sayings daily all on my iPhone like an assembly line worker at a mass production plant. I received a tweet from a friend of mine who's a TV personality. He said, Man, I see your sayings. There too good to be giving them away like this. I really wasn't thinking about that. I was like Who'd be interested in my thoughts? Until one day I saw one of my sayings retweeted on a poster with someone else's name attached as the author. This person was in Asia and I was in Atlanta, Ga. I said to myself, Wait a minute. My saying was good enough to steal in Asia? After that revelation I kept cranking the sayings out but began keeping the ones I thought were really good to myself. I began, however, stretching beyond the 49 Twitter characters on a few of them. I posted those on Facebook. Surprisingly, I received the same response I had from Twitter. I decided to test them. I sent 50 or so of them to various friends I trusted. I was asked to send more. I was told they were helping them. I was like Really? How? Turns out a NY doctor was using them in her morning staff meetings. She said it uplifted them before they would begin their hectic daily routines. Another friend in Kentucky said my sayings were great conversation starters. And when the book is finished, he wants to give copies to his sons. I knew I had something then!
