

We are called to Jesus, we are commissioned to make disciples. One Thing is a field-written Bible study that equips followers of Jesus to be disciples and make disciples of Jesus among their neighbors and the nations. The gospel must be our focus and foundation--we must be clear as we communicate the gospel and clear as we define it with those we work alongside. During the last conversation Jesus had with His disciples before His arrest, He focused their attention on three actions: to abide in Him, to obey His commands, and to love one another. As we go to make disciples, we should identify characteristics and needs of people and genuinely connect with them on a personal level. As we preach the gospel, we should expect the Holy Spirit to be at work and explore how to effectively share our Message. As we teach others, we should consider how to equip them and how to model a faithful life, community, and mission. As we seek to reach others with the gospel, we should encourage others to take the lead and multiply the gospel in new communities. One Thing is structured as an easy-to-follow discussion guide and workbook that comes alongside churches, teams and individuals in mission training and in developing plans for engaging a people group or a city. Suggestions for facilitating and leading this study, a strategy plan template, an answer key, and recommended resources are included. For discipleship groups, use One Thing (white cover) as the leader guide and the One Thing Small-Group Study (red cover) as the participant version. For training purposes, the study is designed for both leaders and participants to use One Thing (white cover). Beyond that, how you use One Thing is completely up to you.
