

Each of us in our own way has to raise a bar of some kind. It comes in all shapes and sizes. It puts us under pressure and we have to deal with that pressure. In most cases it won't be the bar with iron discs on it " which features regularly through this book " but it's a bar nevertheless. And it doesn't get any lighter as we get older. But we have to persevere. Even if we don't feel like it some days. We must be tough. We must keep raising that bar. All the incidents I have recorded here are genuine, but I have changed some of the names to protect the guilty. Sorry, the innocent! I hope it entertains you as much as that strange time and those people entertained me!
