

Excerpt from Sugar Canes and Their Products: Culture and Manufacture There has generally been a greater mistake in the selection of soil than any other feature of this business, mostly growing out of a desire to obtain a large growth, regardless of the quality of the juices. It is well known that low wet, deep black, or freshly manured lands are productive of rank acid vegetation, Whether of fruits, vegetables, or grapes. Stock will shun the vale and nip close the hillside, because of the greatest amount of saccharine and other nutrition the multiplied testimony is now so great, when added to that of our thorough cultivator and valued pioneer, Mr. Ricker, that it is to be hoped we shall soon get out of that rut of error. The alluvial fields of Louisiana are free of ammonia but strongly impregnated with the same properties that make the waters of the Missouri river (out of whose deposits they are chiefly made) among these proper ties magnesia is quite prominent. Where the soil does not possess lime it should be added either in the form of quick-lime or the sulphates.
