

A 75-mile walking route encircling inner London, the Capital Ring links the astonishing number of islands of greenery—including parks, woodlands, abandoned railway lines, towpaths, and nature reserves—that still survive in the heart of the city. It also passes by many of London's leading attractions, among them such overlooked gems as the Thames Barrier, Eltham Palace, Richmond Park, Oxleas Meadows, and the Parkland Walk. This handy reference divides the route into 15 sections—each of which starts and finishes at a public transport point—and is packed with information and historical facts about each of the Ring's numerous highlights.
