July's a busy month for skywatching. Not only are five bright planets in view, but three comets and a newly-discovered nova are also observable. And it all starts. Venus is the third-brightest object in the sky after the sun and moon. that Earth circles the sun, the moon and planets are always found on or near the ecliptic. Day by day, before dawn, watch for the waning moon to sink toward Venus and. The planets visible to the naked eye this month are Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, and Saturn. They are much closer to us than stars other than our own Sun, and thus reflect a bright, steady light back to us here on Earth. Planets on parade, eerie lights, and a change of seasons await sky-watchers this month. The brilliant planet Venus is brightest for its current "morning star". For more skywatching tips, astronomy news, and much more, read StarDate magazine. The Sun's closest planet is visible for a few days at a time just before sunrise or just after sunset. Mercury is at its best this year in the dawn sky in early January. 3 days ago - 6 min You can also watch for the Taurid and Leonid meteor showers and try to spot Corona.

Jupiter and Mercury are visible very low in the western sky after sunset. It will be a challenge to find the two planets. . on November and the best time to watch for them will be the early morning hours of November 1 Oct - 2 min - Uploaded by VideoFromSpace The International Observe the Moon Night is Oct. 20, learn more about the lunar surface.
