

The Symbols of the Apocalypse The Seven Visions to the End ~ Volume 6 As we entered the new millennium excitement about the coming of Antichrist stirred the imagination of both Christians and Pagans alike. Actually, some of the darkest Apocalyptic warnings are coming from secular figures, especially scientists, who are finally becoming aware of the destructive nature of our uncontrolled industrialism, our unrestrained technological development, and our continuing disruption of the natural cycles of our planet. Some feel that these processes have already sealed the fate of mankind and that it is too late to change our own destiny, or the destiny of our planet. In a word, we are doomed! But others offer hope. If we awaken to the crises now, they say, we can still reverse the dangerous trends that have placed us on this slippery slope. The first and most important thing we must do is unite the human race. Only world-wide cooperation can save the world. Anything less cannot meet the threats that face us. There are too many people, and too little food and water. Our technological ingenuity has made a hole in the ozone, and our extravagant use of fossil fuels has created a greenhouse effect that is already scientifically measurable. The destruction of the world's rain forests to make chopsticks for the Japanese, or to create un-farmable land for South American peasants, threatens the entire ecosystem. And our reckless use of pesticides to protect genetically engineered crops could wreak havoc on the world's food chain. In the face of such a dire apocalyptic scenario it is no wonder that most Christians feel that the end of the world is at hand. These very mechanisms are interpreted to be God's method of bringing our age to a close and preparing the world for the reign of Antichrist. Modern Christians are not the first to have entertained apocalyptic expectations. On the contrary, they have been present in every century since the birth of Christianity. But there is a vast difference between the earlier instances of apocalyptic expectation and the powerful forces that drive our current sense of eschatological imminence. It is only in our century that the events described in the Apocalypse could literally occur. Nuclear weapons and waste, dangerous biological agents, and a rapidly changing weather pattern are only a few of the apocalyptic, life threatening things that are peculiar to our age. Rapid, worldwide transportation, sophisticated electronic wizardry, instant international communications via satellite, the World Bank, the World Trade Organization, and the United Nations are also things that have existed only in our time. To put it bluntly, there has never been a more opportune moment to achieve world government. The technical and political requisites are in place. Nor has there ever been a more compelling reason for such universal unity - the very survival of our species depends upon it. If the modern orthodox Christians are correct these events will precipitate the Antichrist to power. When he appears he will deceive mankind into placing their trust solely in him and thus seize the reins of world government. Just how he will do this, and all the events that will precede and follow his reign, are the subject of this volume. Our method will be to examine the Antichrist legend from its earliest beginnings to the present time. After considering how the concept evolved, and examining all the ideas that have accumulated over 22 centuries, we will turn to the Apocalypse and examine the Antichrist legend in the light of the symbolic images described by the Prophet John. It is our hope that this method will clarify, some of the interpretive errors that have attached themselves to the Antichrist legend. Its a fascinating subject.
