

A grey January, a grey boy, an anything but grey love story. Elizabeth Sutton, a head-strong and artistic 17 year old, is horrified when she finds out that a younger boy from her school has killed himself. Whilst trying to deal with her feelings about the tragedy she meets an unfamiliar boy dressed all in grey... How did I not know who he was? He looked about my age, but he definitely wasn't at my school. He looked effortlessly cool in his leather jacket, the kind of boy my best friend would certainly make it her business to know, but I was positive I'd never seen him before... Beth finds herself drawn to Drew, the mysterious boy in grey, but he has a secret. A secret that has been buried for most of his life, a secret that is so dark it has never been shared before... I haven't been very fair on you, Beth, Drew said in a quiet, strained voice. I've made you say so much, but I haven't really told you anything about myself. He stopped and frowned; shaking his head as if he had decided not to say anything else. His eyebrows dropped even further and a muscle began to twitch in his jaw before he finally spoke again. I'm terrified though, that once you know about me; you won't want to see me again... Together, Beth and Drew try to uncover the dark events that will finally lead to Drew's secret being revealed, but the closer they get to the truth, the closer they become to each other. It is Beth who finally has to decide which is paramount; their love for one another or bringing the truth into the light.
